References Category:Home video by yearUsers of assistive technology (AT) are able to interact with a variety of electronic devices. For instance, a user may interact with a keyboard, dials on a telephone, buttons on a remote control, and even with a computer user interface (UI) menu. While such interfaces can enable a user to interact with a device, such interfaces can be cumbersome or difficult to use with some types of AT. Further, some AT may not be well received by users.
